On the wage question President White

You lay stress upon the fact that since 1502 the anthracite mine workers received an increase aggregating $20,000,000. The size of this amount, while we believe not intended, might create a false_impression. There are employed in the anthracite mine ing industry approximately 176,000 men. Thirty million dollars distributed among them gives to each about $178. Inasmuch as this is the total amount for a period of ten years the anthracite miner received the magnificent sum of $17.60 cach a year, scarcely enough to pay the increased cost of one article among those which comprise the necessaries of life.

All of us, I think, are big hearted enough to desire to give to our working people the highest wages that it is possible to give under sound economic laws. It is well enough to talk about the value of the services of the miners, the hazards and all that pertains to their employment, but the fact must still be kept in mind that mining coal is an industrial operation. It cannot be carried on at a loss. We are prepared to demonstrate to you, and we will ask you to examine the books of the Reading Coal and Iron Company, and you will be astonished, probably, to find that we are losing money in operating our colleries. We beg you to consider the serious problem that is involved by increasing the cost of producing anthracite coal beyond a possible return for the capital invested. We cannot arbitrarily advance the price of coal. The public will not permit us to do that. It might involve possible legislation which would be drastic if we attempted it, and invadition to that we are met by competitive conditions all around as. You know that in the strike of 1902, it is currently reported that the bituminous coal operators—one of them admitted to me that he did—contributed freely to your organization to keep up the strike in the anthracite field in order that they might profit by it.

These are conditions that are never considered by the men—I say it with deference to Dr. Seth Low-of the Seth Low type, who only are idealists and see an ideal world instead of an actual world of men who have to deal with the practical problems and obtain practical results.

In answer to your contention that conditions have changed since the award of the anthracite coal strike commission, so as to make it inequitable to renew the agreement for a further term of three years, based on the findings of that commission, we are willing to ask the commission to reconvene and to determine, under the terms of the original commission, whether such changes in conditions have taken place as to require any modifications of the original award.

Any vacancy in the original commission, if you are willing to have the surviving members—Judge George Gray, General Wilson, Bishop Spalding and Messrs. Clarke, Watkins and Parker—act, we are willing shall be supplied in some fair way to be hereafter determined, if this general proposition is acceptable to you.
